Tunnel!

One Japanese company called tenders for construction of a tunnel. They received a tender quotation with very less amount which is not at all comparable with others. So the committee decided to invite the persons. Two persons who quoted the tender attended that meeting in which the committee members asked curiously how can you finish this task with such a low cost?

One of the two answered saying that we start constructing the tunnel from either direction and it can be done with low cost.

Then the committee members asked what is the guarantee that both leads to the same point?

Then both the persons tendered the quotation told "If they leads to the same point, it is good... Otherwise you can have two tunnels for the same cost".
